Health workforce data in Canada: How to optimize its use within research

Date and Time: Wednesday, April 3 1:00 pm - 2:30 pm

Cost: Free

Registration: Microsoft Virtual Events Powered by Teams

"Details

The purpose of this webinar is to bring together health workforce researchers with key pan-Canadian data stewards and Health Workforce Canada to learn about the wealth of health workforce data available to Canadian researchers and interested stakeholders; to provide information on how to access and best use the available data; and to discuss associated data privacy issues. Through this interactive exchange, we aim to bridge the gap between data availability and research needs, and to foster collaboration and innovation for a more robust and responsive health workforce research landscape.

More specifically, the overall goals of this webinar are to:

- Provide a forum to broker and strengthen relationships between health workforce researchers, pan-Canadian health data stewards, and Health Workforce Canada.
- Build awareness of existing health workforce-related data holdings, how to access them, and privacy issues in order to optimize their use within CIHR-funded research."

"In the fourth webinar in HDRN Canada's Federated Analysis: State of the Science Collective Learning Series, Dr. Nichole Austin and Dr. Félix Camirand Lemyre will demonstrate the statistical analyses that can and can not be conducted using practical examples. Moderated by Dr. Kim McGrail, the discussion will focus on key aspects around the value and challenges of using distributed data, as well as the areas where more scientific development is needed.

ABOUT THE SPEAKERS

Dr. Nichole Austin is an Assistant Professor in the School of Health Administration at Dalhousie University, with a cross-appointment in the Department of Community Health and Epidemiology. She is an epidemiologist with research interests in health policy evaluation, health inequities and reproductive health. Recent and current projects explore the impact of supply-side abortion regulations on US abortion rates and provider availability, the impact of Canadian primary care reforms on medication management, and the relationship between provincial assisted reproduction coverage and subsequent fertility/birth outcomes.

Dr. Félix Camirand Lemyre is a statistician, methodologist and professor in the Department of Mathematics at the Université de Sherbrooke (UdS). He is also the director of the Statistical Consulting Center at UdS, a member of the Centre de recherche du Centre hospitalier universitaire de Sherbrooke and a researcher with GRIIS. His research centres on statistical inference for exposures with measurement errors, dependence modelling, distributed data and time series analysis.

Dr. Kim McGrail is the CEO and Scientific Director of HDRN Canada. She is a Professor in the School of Population and Public Health at the University of British Columbia, Director of Research for UBC Health, and Scientific Director of Population Data BC. Her research interests are quantitative policy evaluation and all aspects of population data science.

ABOUT THIS SERIES

Hosted by HDRN Canada, Federated Analysis: The State of the Science Collective Learning Series is a limited webinar series that shares knowledge from experts on the state of the science of federated analytics and related key topics. Lessons learned will be used to develop tools for and to provide support to researchers conducting federated analyses. Watch past webinars.

Improving the Data Landscape on IEHPs: Recent Data on IENs Not Working as Nurses in Ontario

Date and Time: Wednesday, April 17 1:00 pm - 2:00 pm

Webinar will be in English

Cost: Free

Registration: https://newcomernavigation.zoom.us/webinar/register/5817086356693/WN_akLNWNRrQIK0VoZtZt0Phg

A lack of comprehensive health workforce data makes it difficult effectively design and evaluate targeted supports for internationally educated health professionals in Canada. WES has examined how different stakeholders collect and share health workforce data and found that it is nearly impossible to ascertain how many IEHPs are in the country and where they are in their journey towards professional re-entry. In this webinar, WES will:

- Contextualize the fragmented health workforce data landscape in Canada
- Share key findings from a fall 2023 survey of internationally educated nurses (IENs) not currently working as nurses in Ontario
- Offer key considerations and policy implications linked to improving the health workforce data landscape in Ontario and Canada and more effectively supporting IENs in their journey towards registration and professional re-entry

Presenters:

- Joan Atlin – Director, Strategy Policy and Research (SPR), WES Canada

"Join the Society of Refugee Healthcare Providers and Dr. Mary Bunn, PhD, LCSW for a Q&A session about refugee and newcomer mental health!

*Spaces are limited. Preference will be given to non-clinician service providers (for example, case managers, community partners) working with Office of Refugee Resettlement (ORR) eligible populations. Register below and you will receive a confirmation email if there is space available.

Mary Bunn, PhD, LCSW is a licensed clinical social worker and Assistant Professor at the University of Illinois at Chicago (UIC), Department of Psychiatry. She is also Core Faculty and Co-Director of the Global Mental Health Research and Training Program in the UIC Center for Global Health and runs a therapy clinic for refugees and asylum seekers at the UI Health.

Informed by more than twenty years of licensed clinical practice experience delivering therapy services and developing mental health programs domestically and globally, her research focuses on the development and testing of community-based mental health prevention and care interventions for survivors of war and political violence across the migration continuum. This involves using implementation science and human centered design practices to develop and test a spectrum of services that improve mental health and strengthen families and social systems of care and connection. She is particularly interested in peer service models, family and group-based interventions and examining relational processes and factors in interventions.

This session will be an informal, discussion format. There will be no slides or presentation, but an opportunity for participants to ask Dr. Bunn any questions they have about mental health and newcomers. The “integration business” – A radical critique on migration, development and reception services

Date and Time: Tuesday, April 23 9:30 am - 5:00 pm

Cost: Free

Registration: Scholars of Excellence Workshop – The 'integration business': A radical critique on migration, development and reception services - CERC in Migration and Integration - Toronto Metropolitan University \(torontomu.ca\)

"In recent years there has been significant discussion of the “migration infrastructure”, notably the networks, institutions and organizations that mediate migration trajectories. There has also been critical analysis of the economies of migration control that have emerged around borders, both territorial and digital ones, and the private interests behind them. Less attention has been paid though to the sector that has emerged around migrant reception. This workshop takes a radical critical approach on to examining these concerns, looking at how provision of local migrant services, whether in border areas, or locations of settlement, give rise to a migrant “integration business”. This business becomes part of local economies, while resting on structures of inequality, displacement, dispossession and unequal capital accumulation, and deepening these processes.

The workshop is organized into two panels. The first focuses on the local aspects of this migration industry in both border areas and settlement locations, critically analyzing the ways locals, settled migrants and recently arrived asylum seekers, refugees or migrants become entangled in forms of service provision that extract capital and constitute multi-scalar processes of governance. The second panel expands this critical perspective by engaging with the broader policy and political discourses on migration and development. Contributors to both panels seek to unmask the processes of capital accumulation that underlie the regulation of mobility, territory, social life and political subjectivities...."

A culturally informed framework when working with immigrants and refugees

Date and Time: Tuesday, April 23 1:30 pm - 2:30 pm

Cost: Free

Registration: A culturally informed framework when working with immigrants and refugees Registration, Tue, 23 Apr 2024 at 1:30 PM | Eventbrite

"Description:

Paying attention to culture is vital to understanding the experiences and meaning individuals place on their psychological wellbeing. Immigrant and refugee communities require culturally responsive care embedded into organizational practices to address their post-migration stressors and social inequities. Culturally responsive care requires breaking down the language barrier, providing psychoeducation and explaining the role of mental health system.

Join this webinar with Dr. Lisa Andermann and Norma Hannant, MSW, and after attending you will be able to:

- Recognize the intersection of migration, mental health, and post-migration stressors.
- Understand cultural humility, cultural safety and cultural competency in practice.
- Become familiar with cultural formulation interviews (CFI) and the explanatory model to understand an individual's life context, their needs and meaning they ascribe to their problems to negotiate appropriate and relevant interventions and referrals.

Presenters:

Dr. Lisa Andermann, MPhil, MDCM, FRCPC

Dr. Andermann, is an Associate Professor in the Department of Psychiatry, University of Toronto (UofT) and Co-Chair of the Equity and Inclusion Council (UofT). She is also the Director of the Toronto Addis Ababa Psychiatry Program.

In addition to her work at the Mount Sinai Ethnocultural Assertive Community Treatment, Dr. Andermann is a Consultant Psychiatrist at the Canadian Centre for Victims of Torture; and with the Northern Psychiatric Outreach Program providing outreach to remote communities on Baffin Island.

She co-edited a book entitled Refuge and Resilience: Promoting Resilience and Mental Health among Refugees and Forced Migrants (Springer, 2014). She is a former Board Member of the Society for the Study of Psychiatry and Culture and current Board Member with the World Association of Cultural Psychiatry.

Lisa has an undergraduate degree in Anthropology from McGill University, where she completed her medical studies, and a graduate degree in Social Anthropology from Cambridge University.

Norma Hannant, MSW RSW

Norma Hannant is a social worker at the New Beginnings Clinic in the Mood and Anxiety Services at the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH). She provides mental health support for refugees and immigrants using a trauma-informed, culturally sensitive, anti-oppressive lens rooted in evidence-based practices.

Norma has worked in the mental health sector for over 20 years. She has experience in hospital-based settings, community-based counselling agencies and child and family services. She has taught and coordinated mental health workshops in Mexico, Chile and Brazil on the shared care model, psychosocial rehabilitation and stigma.

She has an interest in psychosocial community approaches in working with the Latinx diaspora. Norma is currently providing psychotherapy and mental health counselling as an Interim Federal Healthcare provider to refugee claimants. She speaks fluent Spanish. She has an undergraduate degree from the University of Waterloo, majoring in Spanish. Norma received her Master of Social Work degree from the University of Toronto in 2001."

Feeling Like an Insider, or Just a Means to an End? Equity and Inclusion in the Ontario Settlement Sector

Date and Time: Wednesday, April 24 1:00 pm - 2:00 pm

Webinar will be in English

Cost: Free

Registration: https://newcomernavigation.zoom.us/webinar/register/3017049127497/WN_tyvopuSrQjqri1S02hbMuA

Speakers :

- Michaël Séguin, Assistant Professor, Saint Paul University;
- Bianca Briciu, Assistant Professor, Saint Paul University;
- Sahar Zohni, Manager of Operations, Planning and Performance, N4

Description:

This webinar will share the result of a partnership research between Saint Paul University and N4 about the subjective experiences of inclusion for immigrant employees in eight settlement agencies across Ontario. The research questioned to what extent the commitment of these agencies to the inclusion of immigrants was reflected in their work culture, policies, and structures. The webinar will discuss the tension between the agencies' celebration of diversity, their dedication to inclusion, and the constraints that lead sometimes to the utilitarian hiring of immigrants as means to an end. It will also present best practices and concrete strategies for creating a welcoming environment that promotes equity and inclusion. The focus will be on practices specific to the settlement sector.
